Recognition of vocational qualifications at the labour market

Lifelong Learning in a globalised Europe requires a transparent method that allows mutual recognition and intelligibility of skills, competences and knowledge. The European Credit System for Vocational Education and Training (ECVET) enables the comparison of qualifications between different education systems even across national borders. The Erasmus+ project “ECVET goes Business” aims at raising awareness of this valuable transparency tool in the world of business by emphasising on the immediate benefits of ECVET.

After two years of intense work on the “ECVET goes Business” project, a final conference will be held. Project partners from Germany, Ireland, Italy, Slovenia, Spain, and Hungary will come to Austria to present the Intellectual Outputs the project team has elaborated.

Participants of the final conference will learn how to use national and international qualification frameworks and how the recognition of skills and competences is possible using European transparency instruments. Additionally, experts in the field of ECVET will offer an insight into the present and future of the European world of business and will be available for personal discussions on pending issues of ECVET.
